Greetings!

As we approach Pentecost, here are two Holy Spirit prayers. The first prayer is "Thursday Night Prayer," a contemporary prayer that draws on the Celtic tradition. It comes from John Philip Newell's Sounds of the Eternal: A Celtic Psalter. The second prayer is much older. The author is Richard Rolle of Hampole, an English hermit and mystic (1300-1349). His prayer is called "God's Love."

Thursday Night Prayer

I have witnessed inspiration of the spirit in the voice of a woman, in the colors of an artist, in the prophetic vision of a leader, in the most simple acts of daily kindness and neighborliness.
I have experienced creativity in my own soul, in seeing things anew,
in unplanned utterances of wonder and passion, in the most ordinary actions of tending and caring.
In the life of the world this night, in every nation and among every people, let there be fresh stirrings of your Spirit.
In my own soul and in the world tonight let there be fresh stirrings of your might creating Spirit.

God's Love*

O Holy Spirit, Who breathes where You will, breathe into me and draw me to Yourself.

Invest the nature You have shaped, with gifts so flowing with honey that from intense joy in Your sweetness, this clay might turn from lesser things, that it may accept (as You give them) spiritual gifts, and through pleasing jubilant, it may melt, entirely, in holy love, reaching finally out to touch the Uncreated Light.
